QUEENS CIVICS QUESTION TIMES ON CONGESTION TAX

Letter to New York Times by Queens Civic Congress Transportation Committee Chair James Trent

To New York Times
Letters to Editor sent via email

To the editor:

I am very confused by conflicting reports in today's NY Times (Friday, July 13, 2007). In the Opinion section your editorial entitled "Sneezing at $500 Million" admonished those state leaders who do not return to Albany by July 16, 2007 to pass Mayor Bloomberg's controversial congestion-pricing plan and you advise voters to hold them accountable for letting this deadline slip by.

In the New York Metro Section of today's paper "Skepticism in Albany About Traffic Plan Deadline" you state that "a state government official with knowledge of the Washington meeting said the Mayor himself had urged federal officials to hold firm on the July 16 deadline". It appears that Mayor Bloomberg is the official responsible for setting such a quick deadline on an issue that requires a thorough discussion on all aspects of his plan including the hardships it will cause to the working class of New York City and the surrounding suburbs. Why should the Mayor not be admonished for backing legislators into a corner by shortening the time period to discuss this issue?

Let's urge our legislators to thoroughly examine this issue and not be rushed into a decision by this artificially imposed deadline.

James A. Trent
Chair, Transportation Committee
