

CELEBRATE SPRING MIGRATION AT RIDGEWOOD RESERVOIR

Date: Saturday, April 19, 2008

Time: Tour begins at 9:00am

Meeting Place: Upper Highland Park parking lot

Join Eric Slayton of the Wildlife Conservation Society for a walk around the natural habitats of Highland Park's unique Ridgewood Reservoir.

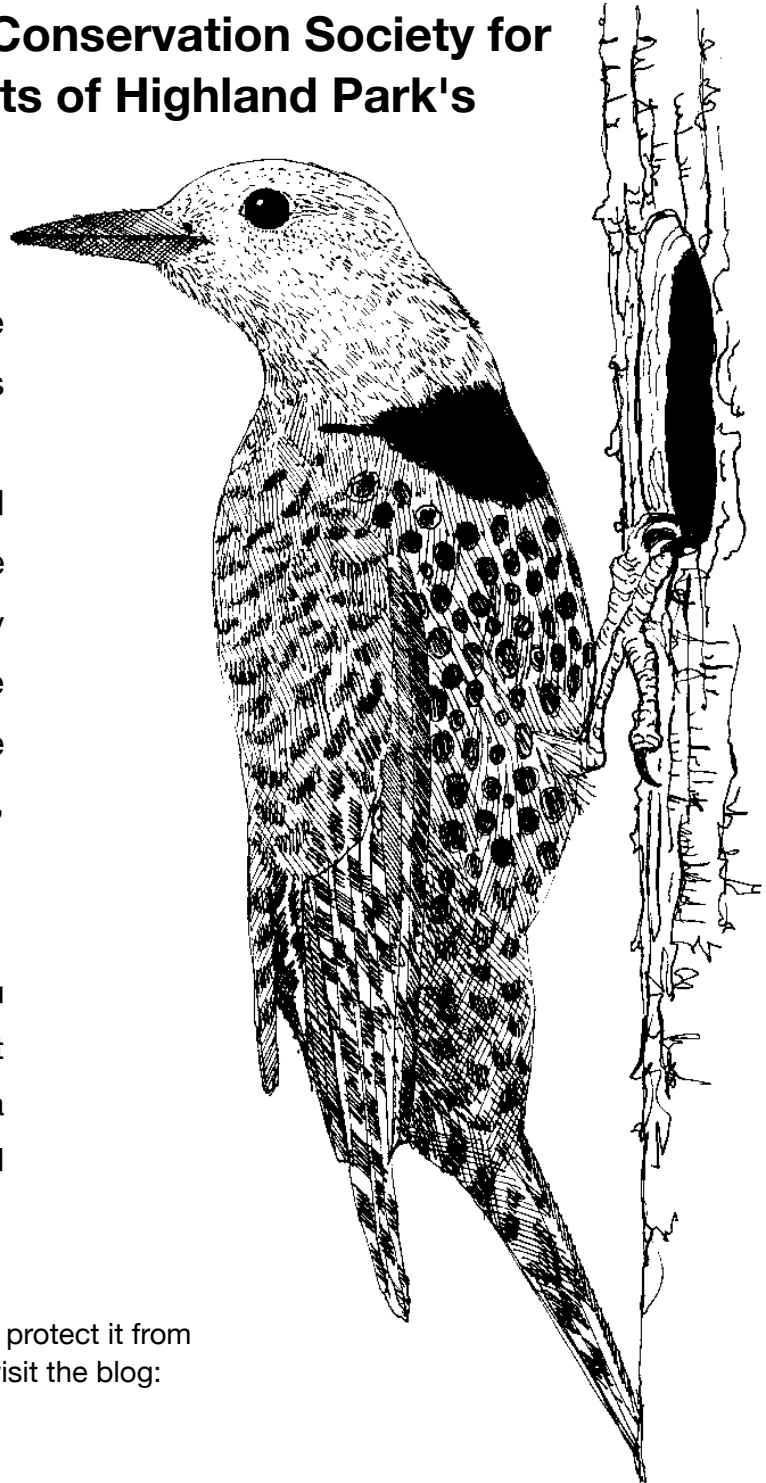

Come learn about and see some of the hundreds of different kinds of birds that pass through New York City during Spring Migration. Eric is an ornithologist for "The New York Bird Monitoring Program" and studies the importance New York City's parks for migratory birds. His work has learned valuable information on why our city's natural places are not just important for the well being of humans, but also the survival of many species of birds.

The tour is free and opened to the public. If you have a pair of binoculars, bring them. You don't have to be a birdwatcher to enjoy nature on a spring morning walk at Highland Park's Ridgewood Reservoir.

To learn more about Ridgewood Reservoir and efforts to protect it from development by the Department of Parks & Recreation visit the blog:

<http://ridgewoodreservoir.blogspot.com>

or you can email us at - ridgewoodreservoir@gmail.com

This event is sponsored by the Ridgewood Reservoir Education & Preservation Project